

LOVELIGHT COMMUNITY

"Community leaders, school districts and other organizations should explore strategic partnerships to make a lasting impact in the lives of youth and their families".

Recent world events remind us of the gaping wholes in our communities. While it feels like liberation is bubbling to the surface for some, there are still so many people fighting for equality. As we celebrate progress, there are victories to win.

As a thought leader in the world of digital safety and content moderation, I have increased visibility on the marginalized experience around the globe. Building safe online communities has helped re-ignite my vision for arts programs in underserved communities.

Many online communities are aligned with the following principles:

- leading of community requires authentic love and care for the people in it and an appreciation for their lived experiences. Nurture, love and support your unique's identities, gifts and perspectives.
- Building trust in with your community requires honesty and transparency, especially when supporting marginalized peoples or supporting those navigating sensitive situations.
- Communication is essential. Speak the community's language, learn culture and lingo and clearly articulate goals and objectives. This de-mystifies operations and creates a safe space where folks can be their most authentic selves.

Community leaders, school districts and other community organizations should explore co-operations and invest in partnerships to make a lasting impact on youth and their families.

The Love Light Community was chartered by a group of 7-10 talented young people in Los Angeles and the effervescent love and support of our community. The LL vision has inspired youth around Los Angeles to share their gift of song and good-will to congregations and crowds around greater Los Angeles.

We welcome you to explore LL's 2023 mission to amplify young voices and to spread light and love to the world. Partner with us as we uplift a generation of talented musicians, singers, innovators, activists and global leaders.
